1. ARGUMENT

2 1. INTERPRETATION OF NMSA 54-5-16

3 The State contends that the religious proviso in NMSA
4 54-5-16 does not protect "individual use" of peyote "outside a 5 religious ceremony," and thus defendant is without the proviso.
6 However, neither the wording of the statute nor a logical reading
7 of it give any support to the State's distinctions.

8 The proviso to NMSA 54-5-16 does not confine its protec-
9 tion to a "ceremony"; the word does not appear in the statute.
10 The intent of the statute is to protect religious faith, and the 11 test should be the honesty of that faith, not the grandness of 12 ceremony accompanying it. Peyote supplies for Native American 13 Church ceremonies are usually obtained in Texas and must be trans-14 ported to the area where Church members live (such as Taos) and 15 stored there until the time of use. People v. Woody, 61 Cal.2d 16 716, 40 Cal. Repr. 69, 72 (1964). Surely these activities must 17 be protected.

18 The State also argues that the NMSA 54-5-16 proviso 19 applies only to "organizations", not to individual members of such 20 organizations, thus excluding defendant. Admittedly the use of 21 the word "organization" is awkward, because it is an abstraction.
22 But an organization can possess peyote only through its members.
23 It is reasonable to infer that the Legislature used the word
24 "organization" to be certain that the exemption would be confined 25 to religious purposes sanctioned by such an organization. And as 26 pointed out in appellant's brief-in-chief, the carrying of peyote
27 as a religious "protector" is an accepted practice of the Native
28 American Church. See citations in brief-in-chief page 2 at lines
29 24-27. As the California Supreme Court noted in Woody, this

30
31 1. A California prosecutor attempted to argue that the 32 Woody ruling is limited to a "ceremony" of the Native American Church, but that contention was rejected by the Los Angeles Court of Appeal in People v. Red Elk, unreported opinion, Calif. Ct. of Appeal 2d Distr. Crim. No. 17157 decided June 5, 1970. Like the defendant here, Red Elk claimed he was carrying a peyote amulet.

1 practice has been common for Church members going to war for our 2 Country. People v. Woody, supra, 40 Cal. Repr. at 74.

3 Although the question is not presented by this case, it
4 might be noted that the statutory interpretation suggested by 5 appellant would have the effect of prohibiting use of peyote (in 6 the sense of ingestion) outside a ceremony of the Native American 7 Church, because such use is considered blasphemous by the Church
8 and thus could not qualify as a "religious sacramental purpose."
9 See discussion in Giannella, Religious Liberty, 80 Harv.L.Rev.
10 1381, 1408 (1967). But of course defendant is not accused of such 11 use, merely of possession. The proviso should protect all 12 possession which is religiously connected: the gathering, trans-
13 portation, and storage of peyote and the carrying of a peyote
14 amulet such as defendant's.

15 The remaining question of statutory interpretation is 16 whether defendant's membership in the Oklahoma branch of the Church
17 rather than the New Mexico branch excludes him from the proviso's
18 protection. It should not do so. The same Church is involved, 19 with the same religious practices; this much is conceded by the 20 State. To exclude defendant from the proviso on this basis would 21 be an excessively literalistic reading of the statute inconsistent
22 with its purpose. Defendant differs from a New Mexico Church
23 member only in the accident of his birth and residence in another
24 state. Such a reading should also be avoided to avoid the serious
25 Constitutional questions otherwise confronted. See appellant's
26 brief-in-chief Argument 2.

27 3. THE COURT BELOW ERRED IN ITS INTERPRETATION
28 OF NEW MEXICO LAW ON THE REQUIREMENT THAT 29 THERE BE SHOWN A KNOWING VIOLATION OF THE LAW

30 For a conviction of unlawful possession of a narcotic or 31 dangerous drug under New Mexico law, the State must prove knowledge 32 by the defendant both of the presence of the drug and of its dangerous character. State v. Giddings, 67 N.M. 87, 352 P.2d 1003

1 (1960). (The court below referred to this question as intent to 2 violate the statute, and it was so described in appellants' brief-
3 in-chief and in the State's answering brief.) The Giddings case
4 involved marijuana possession prohibited by NMSA 54-7-13, and it
5 has been cited as applicable in subsequent cases involving mari-
6 juana sale [State v. Favela, 79 N.M. 490, 444 P.2d 1001 (App. 1968);
7 State v. Romero, 79 N.M. 522, 445 P.2d 587 (App. 1968)] and heroin
8 sale, State v. Maes, 81 N.M. 550, 469 P.2d 529, 533 (App. 1970).
9 It is difficult to see any basis for a different rule for peyote
10 possession.

11 As argued in the brief-in-chief (at page 6), the court
12 below clearly misinterpreted the law on this point, observing, "If 13 I had to make a finding as to whether this young man knew that this 14 was Peyote, I don't know what I'd do." Tr. 91.

15 4. SUBSTANTIALITY OF THE EVIDENCE

16 The State selects one sentence out of the record of 17 testimony by the chemist, Mr. Ridgeway. Isolated from the numerous 18 contradictions pointed out in the brief-in-chief, this gives some 19 support to the State's case. But the testimony as a whole is 20 hopelessly confused. The State cites the rule that conflicts in 21 testimony should be resolved in favor of the judgment below. But 22 this rule normally refers to conflicts between different sources of 23 evidence, such as two witnesses whose testimony differs. Here we 24 have a witness who is the sole source of evidence on a necessary
25 element of the offense and who repeatedly impeaches himself. A 26 reasonable man could not conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that 27 Mr. Ridgeway had detected "anhalonium commonly known as peyote."

28 Furthermore the evidence quoted in the State's brief
29 proves too much. Mr. Ridgeway said that his test detects peyote
30 or mescaline. Mescaline occurs in other cacti besides peyote
31 (the example given in the reference following is the species 32 Trichocereus) and has been made synthetically. E.P. Claus and

1 V.E. Tyler, Pharmacognosy (Lea & Febziger, Philadelphia 1965)
2 p.339. Possession and use of mescaline are presumably separately
3 prohibited by NMSA 54-6-38. There is no evidence whatsoever to 4 show that Mr. Ridgeway's tests did not disclose synthetic mesca-
5 line or Trichocereus mescaline rather than peyote mescaline.

6 In response to appellant's argument that the State
7 failed to show a usable amount of peyote, the State's brief asserts 8 that the evidence showed 2.5 grams or a teaspoon to a teaspoon and 9 a half. Answering brief page 12. This is not correct. Mr.
10 Ridgeway testified that this was the total weight and volume of 11 the contents of defendant's pouch, including any inert matter
12 present. When asked the quantity of illegal substance, he said he 13 didn't know. Tr. 63-64. Thus there is no evidence that defendant 14 possessed a usable amount of peyote.

15 5. RIGHT TO JURY TRIAL

16 The State justifies the provision of a jury for lesser 17 offenses in Magistrate's Court but not for more serious ones in 18 District Court on the ground that some magistrates are not lawyers 19 But a basic reason for the jury system is to ameliorate the 20 occasional harshness of strict applications of law by committing 21 the ultimate decision to the conscience of the community through 22 a lay jury. This value makes a jury more needed before a lawyer-
23 judge, who will feel more strictly bound by the letter of the law,
24 than before a lay judge. Therefore this rationale cannot overcome
25 the discrimination in the State's system of jury trial provision 26 described in the brief-in-chief.
